“Who Rules the World?”

Flashpoints and Power Rivalries from Europe to Far East

East-West power rivalries and flashpoints around the world have increased the risk of a new war endangering world peace. From inter and intra state wars, East-West confrontations, ethnic conflicts, arms trade and extraction of resources by rich from poor countries are igniting violence.

One of the flashpoints is China-Japan: a dispute over a few islands has sharpened due to China's rising economic/military power and Japanese premier Shinzo Abe's conservative nationalism, anti-China rhetoric and expansion of Japan's military. With North Korea close by and US redefining its Asia policy of re-orienting militarily to the Pacific, north-east Asia is another key flashpoint.

Ukraine/Caucasus: here Russia's 'Near Abroad' security sphere is challenged by NATO/EU expansionism from the West and Jihadism from the East [e.g. Chechnya] making for several flashpoints involving both global and regional powers.

Distinguished speakers will explore today's dangerous geopolitical situation, threats of future conflicts and solutions for a safer and peaceful world, as all advances in human civilisation happened during long periods of peace.
